UPS AND DOWNS OF MEXICO.

Various conflicting reports regarding the whereabouts of Senor Carranza leads to the suspicion that he has changed places with his old antagonist, the sanguinary Villa. The retirement of the latter from the great outdoor sport of banditry leaves a vacancy which can be filled readily by Carranza who is not likely to capitulate to the revolutionary leaders even though they should extend amnesty and permit him to leave the country unpunished for his long reign of bloodshed. The former president of Mexico is not such a man as to allow himself to be judged from his years of exile. He is acknowledged to be one of the hardest riders and the best seasoned veterans of his country. With his following of men who have picked him from the regular army of the republic, an abundant supply of ammunition and a knowledge of every trail and by path in the mountains he may prove as elusive as a mountain goat and continue for years in presenting a guerrilla warfare that will shift the responsibility from Carranza to the president of Carranza. The outlook American editors, seated on the borders are not placing too much reliance on a complete transformation through the silence of Obregon as many of these experienced observers believe the masses of the Mexicans will not develop any warm friendship for the American government that the regime of graft, pillage and assassination will continue with slight amelioration. Conservative business men on this side of the Rio Grande, however, still have hopes from speedy pacification of the country and the reopening of business opportunities to American investors. The strongest argument in favor of this regeneration is the necessity for the new administration appealing to the United States bankers for an immediate loan in order that the new government may be established on a secure foundation. The new chiefman has the advantage of spending many years in this country where he made his home in Los Angeles where it is said, the groundwork of the present revolution was laid and his pro-American tendencies will give the strong support of his wife who is imbued with strong American principles, imbibed during an early womanhood spent among the best classes of Americans on the Pacific coast.

THIRD TERM SPECTER.

With the date for the Democratic national convention only one month distant the specter of a third term looms before the house of Democracy. The action of Mr. Wilson in declaring that the party must stand on either the Versailles treaty implies that he will be the logical candidate which is insured by the Milwaukee Sentinel as a case of solid assurance and far from presumption in an editorial dealing with the subject as follows:

"Whether Mr. Wilson could succeed in compelling his nomination from a convention, outwitting Mr. Bryan and tied to the two thirds majority rule is a question. But no such doubt is likely to disturb Mr. Wilson. All of which being the case it behooves the Republican convention to reckon seriously with the possibility of a third term nomination and to be very careful to avoid the situation which gave Mr. Wilson his first term in 1912 and his second term in 1916. For his first term Mr. Wilson was indebted to the bolt prominently participated in by Hiram Johnson for the second term the scale was turned in his favor by Hiram Johnson's failure to support Mr. Hughes in California. Friends of Hiram Johnson are already talking of bolting the convention this year unless they can have their own way. It is important to note that they are likely to get up by their own logic, for in the case of Hiram Johnson's nomination a good many Republican voters undoubtedly would balk at the idea of supporting a man so largely responsible for letting the country in for two terms of Woodrow Wilson. A candidate, therefore, upon whom both wings of the party would unite is the thing to be desired, as against the awful possibility of a third term for Mr. Wilson, who, to all appearances, very plainly means to get that 'great and solemn referendum' before the country in his own person. As the Chicago convention comes first, may we not surmise that Mr. Wilson's final determination and statement of his intentions will be suspended until after the proceedings at Chicago shall have given him a fair basis of the calculation of the election possibilities."

A prompt decision to determine the choice of delegates to Chicago should be made by the Executive Committee of the Republican State Central Committee. Twelve delegates and as many alternates have been named to represent this state in the national convention when the allotment calls for six delegates and six alternates. Somebody has to remain at home. The best way to decide on those entitled to credentials is to draw lots. Let the twelve names of delegates be placed in a hat and have six drawn by some disinterested person. The first six delegates and their alternates should be accorded the distinction of going. Any other system would be open to the charge of favoritism and likely to provoke ill feeling. The editor of the Bonanza being one of the twelve delegates elected proposes this plan that harmony may prevail in the Republican party of Nevada.

CLIPPED AND CREDITED.

RUSSIANS ARE FREE IN CHINA

(Correspondence Associated Press)

PEKIN, April 21. The Soviet authorities at Irkutsk, Siberia, have asked the Chinese government to release from China the diplomats and consuls of the Old Russian government who have continued to live in China since the overthrow of Emperor Nicholas. The request is signed by Mr. Janson, delegate of the Council of Commissaries in Siberia and the Far East.

The Soviet note declares that these diplomats and consuls still are being supported by the government to them by the Chinese in violation of the treaty of commerce and navigation of 1907. It also declares that the Soviet government has no objection to the release of these diplomats and consuls if they will leave China within a reasonable time. The powers given to these officers of the former Emperor have long ceased to exist but the officers continue to live in their houses and to fool the Chinese with the assistance of Japan and the Allies. The Chinese people should take cognizance of this.

MADE MONEY FROM DANDELIONS.

Collecting dandelions an Italian woman living in Philadelphia has been able to save $2,000 during the last 40 years. It appears that about forty years ago the woman's husband died, leaving his widow unprovided for. She started to collect dandelions, and sold them to her countrymen in the city. A few days ago she died, and it was found that her savings had accumulated to a little more than $2,000.
